Remembrance Service at Marsh Green War Memorial

On Sunday 8th November a substantial number of Marsh Green residents gathered at the village War Memorial to remember the young men of the parish who gave their lives in the service of their country during the First and Second World Wars.

The service commenced with the Act of Remembrance. Wreaths and crosses were then laid at the memorial by representatives of local organisations and members of the community in tribute to those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

A key part of the service was the reading of the Marsh Green Roll of Honour. As each name recorded on the War Memorial was read aloud, those who gave their lives were individually remembered by the assembled community.

The Last Post, played by a village resident, marked the start of the Two-Minute Silence. Reveille was then sounded at the conclusion of the silence, providing a poignant reminder of both sacrifice and hope.

The service concluded with the recitation of the Kohima Epitaph:

"When you go home, tell them of us and say:
For your tomorrow, we gave our today."

Following the formal service, the Parish Clerk played the pipes, performing the lament The Dark Island. The commemoration then drew to a close with the retreat marches The Green Hills of Tyrol and When the Battle's O'er.

The large attendance reflected the importance that the people of Marsh Green continue to place on remembering those from the village who served and died for their country. Through services such as this, their courage and sacrifice are remembered and honoured by each new generation. The Parish Council is particularly grateful to Mr Julian Turnbull, whose careful planning and organisation ensured that the commemoration was conducted smoothly and with the dignity and respect that the occasion deserved.
